The image displays two worksheets from 'The Responsive Educator 2023'. The first worksheet, titled 'Train Your Dragon to Follow Rules: My Self-Evaluation', features a grid for students to evaluate their behavior based on eight statements. The second worksheet, titled 'Train Your Dragon to Follow Rules: Character Traits- Finding Evidence', provides a structured space for students to identify and describe character traits of a character named Diggory Do.

Train Your Dragon to Follow Rules: My Self-Evaluation

Name _____ Date _____

Read each statement below. Place a check mark in the box that best matches your behavior in the classroom.

	Always	Sometimes	Never
I know what the rules are.
I follow classroom and school rules.
I ask for help if I don't understand a rule.
I don't break the rules on purpose.
If I disagree about a rule, respectfully talk about it.
If I don't understand the reason for a rule, I just ignore it.
I "bend the rules" to be able to do what I want.
I encourage others to do things that they aren't supposed to.
I follow the rules even if no one is watching.

Train Your Dragon to Follow Rules: Character Traits- Finding Evidence

Name _____ Date _____

A trait is something that makes one person, animal, or thing different from another. Character traits can be outside or inside characteristics.

Directions: Think about the character of Diggory Do. Name at least two of his outside traits and give evidence from the text to back it up. Then do the same for at least two inside traits.

Outside Traits

Outside traits are the physical traits of the character, or what you see when you look at them. Think about things such as height, eye color, clothing, etc.
