Why Do You Need a Visual Behavior Chart?

- Behavior varies across the day
- Younger students need concrete feedback
- Detailed tracking takes too much time
- Patterns can be hard to spot without clear visual data

How Does It Work?

- Organizes the day into manageable sections
- Teacher records behavior using simple smiley face visuals, adding notes as needed.
- Provides an at-a-glance picture of the student's day

A printed version of the behavior tracking form. It features a header with 'Student:' and 'Date:' fields, a 'Positive Behavior I am working on:' section, and a table with three columns: 'Task/Activity', 'How Did I Do?' (with three smiley face icons: happy, neutral, sad), and 'Notes'. The table has 10 rows. A small illustration of a rooster is on the left, and a barn and chickens are on the right. A copyright notice '©The Responsive Educator 2022' is visible on the right side.

A digital version of the behavior tracking form displayed on a tablet. The layout is identical to the printed version, with fields for 'Student:', 'Date:', 'Positive Behavior I am working on:', and a table with 'Task/Activity', 'How Did I Do?' (smiley face icons), and 'Notes' columns. The tablet has a black bezel.
