No Hitting

Social Support Story

Includes Audio &
Low-Ink Print Version

For Targeted Social Skills Support

Part of the Social Support Story Series

SCROLL
to take a look inside

© TheResponsiveEducator

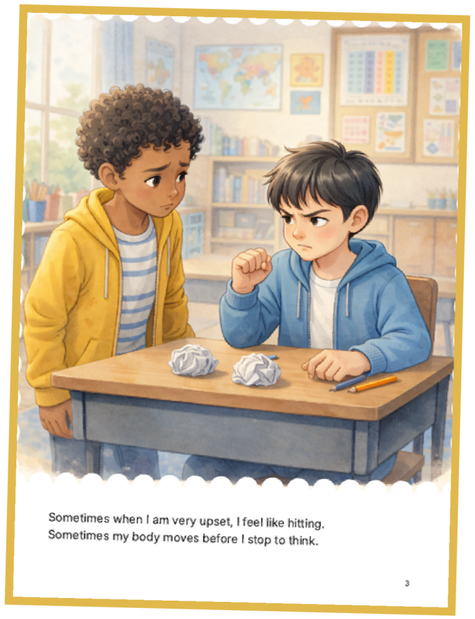

When Students Struggle with Hitting When Upset

© TheResponsiveEducator

Some students may hit or use their hands when they feel upset or frustrated.

They may not yet understand:

- ☑ how hitting affects others
- ☑ safer ways to handle strong feelings
- ☑ what they can do instead when they feel upset

★ Social stories can help students understand these situations in a clear and supportive way.

Why This Skill Matters

© TheResponsiveEducator

- Hitting can hurt others and damage relationships
- Students may not yet have safe strategies for handling big feelings
- Learning alternative behaviors helps students stay safe and in control
- Explicit instruction makes these expectations clearer

How Social Stories Help Students

Social stories help students understand social expectations through clear language and predictable structure.

They can help students:

- ☑ understand expected behavior
- ☑ learn appropriate ways to respond
- ☑ build confidence in social situations

★ For many students, seeing a situation explained step-by-step makes expectations easier to understand.

© TheResponsiveEducator

What Makes This Social Support Story Different

© TheResponsiveEducator

This social support story goes beyond simply describing the expected behavior.

Students also see:

- how their actions affect others
- how others may respond to the behavior
- how relationships can be affected
- what they can do to repair the situation

★ This deeper understanding helps students apply the skill in real situations.

Help Students See the Impact of Their Behavior

© TheResponsiveEducator

- Illustrations show how others feel in the situation
- Facial expressions and body language help students recognize social cues
- Supports discussion during 1-on-1 or small-group instruction
- Helps students connect actions with other's reactions

Teach Students What to Do Instead

© TheResponsiveEducator

- Models safe ways to respond when feeling upset
- Teaches students how to recognize when they are getting angry
- Includes language students can use to ask for help or take a break
- Reinforces positive ways to interact with others

- ★ Helps students practice self-control, not just avoid consequences

Give Students Language They Can Use

© TheResponsiveEducator

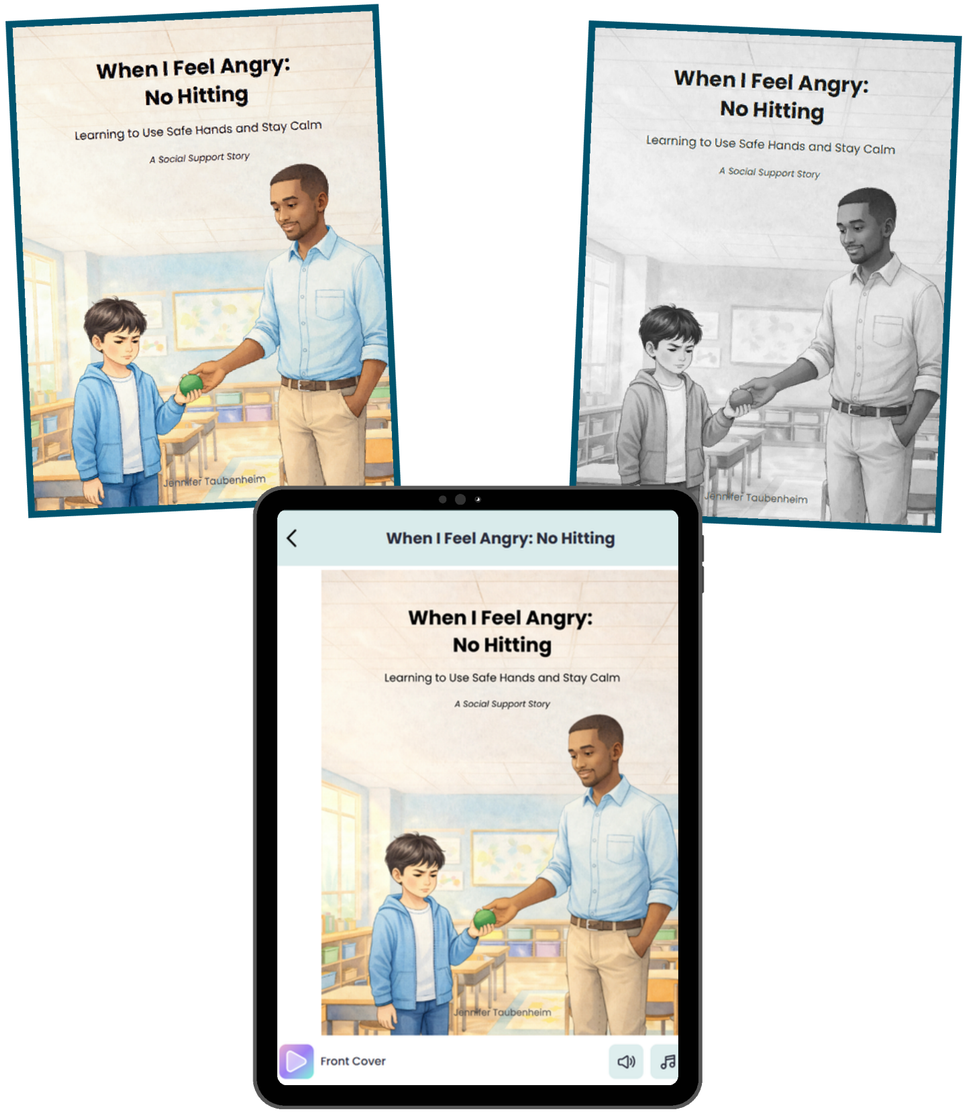

- Written in clear first-person language that students can internalize
- Models respectful ways to communicate with peers
- Reinforces positive self-talk for social situations
- Helps students remember what to do in real situations

Formats Included

- Full color social support story
- Black & white version for low-ink printing & home use
- Audio narration link for repeated listening and reinforcement
- QR code for easy access at school or home

© TheResponsiveEducator

Use the Color Story for Instruction

- Ideal for 1-on-1 social skills instruction
- Works well for small group discussions
- Illustrations help students interpret social situations
- Supports guided conversation about behavior and relationships

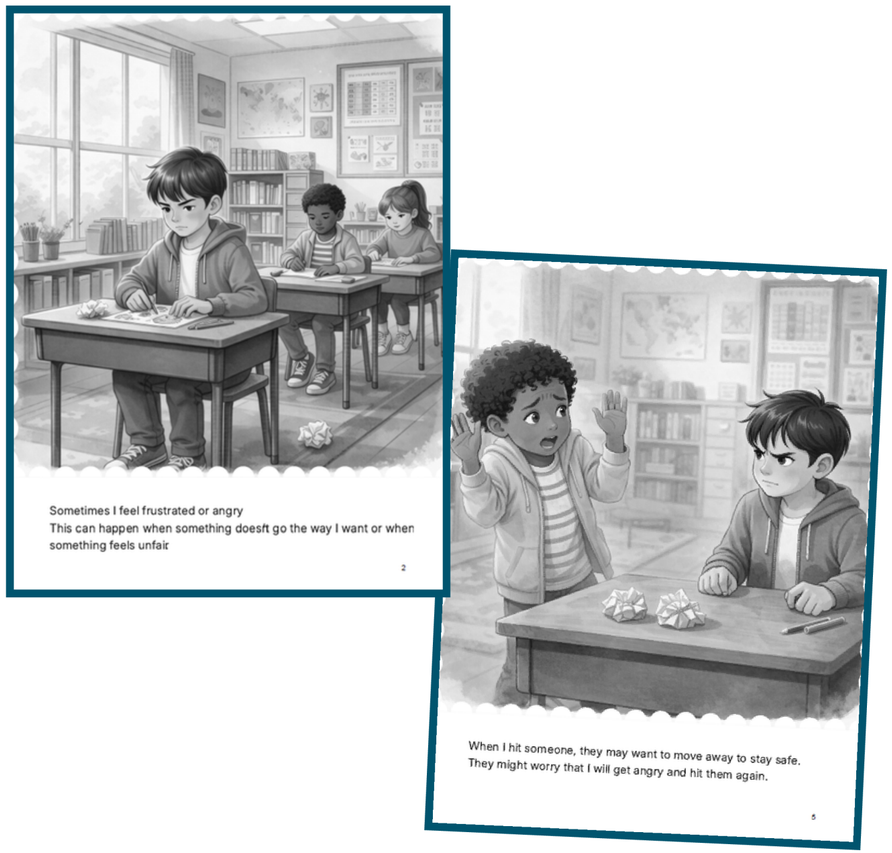

© TheResponsiveEducator

Use the Black & White Version for Instruction or Practice

© TheResponsiveEducator

- Print a low-ink version for everyday use
- Send home for consistent reinforcement
- Supports carryover between school and home

Support Independent Listening with Audio Narration

© TheResponsiveEducator

- Includes a link to a digital bookshelf with audio narration
- Students can listen while following along with the story
- Supports repeated exposure and skill reinforcement
- Ideal for centers, independent practice, or home reinforcement

How to Use This Social Support Story

- Use during 1-on-1 social skills instruction
- Read and discuss in small social skills groups
- Use in special education or general education classrooms
- Helpful for ABA therapy, counseling, or behavior support sessions
- Send home to help families reinforce the skill

© TheResponsiveEducator